N is for Nightingale

BY AUNT GERTIE.

It was just a chance which led us up a winding little path to the bird house in the Zoo yesterday.

Such a chirping and twittering I never heard.

It must have been nearly dinner time, for they were all hopping about in their cages and seemed, each, to be trying to attract more attention than the other.

Artist Barnie and I stopped a minute to look at the brightly colored parrot. Then I heard the sweet voice of the nightingale over on the other side.

And that's how you happen to see this picture and story.

The nightingale, you know, boys and girls, is related to the robin and the thrush. It is about the size of a wood thrush.

It is quite a sober-looking little bird, but there is beauty about its head, and its eyes are very bright.

Of course, the thing which makes the nightingale most famous is its beautiful voice.

Now I am going to tell you something interesting about the song of this bird. It uses it to woo its mate.

Instead of talking to the female bird when it wishes to court it, it sings the sweetest notes it knows to attract attention. Then after the sweetheart has been won the proud nightingale keeps up his glorious song while the eggs are laid in the little nest.

When the baby birds come and want food to eat, the proud daddy nightingale stops singing and begins to hunt caterpillars, little worms and wee, wee birds.

He has no more time for singing till the babies are grown strong and big.

There is no other song of a bird so wonderful and beautiful as that of the nightingale. People have been known to go miles to hear it!

Do you know that the nightingale is a very timid little creature?

Perhaps that may be the reason it so often sings at night or very, very early in the morning!

ARREST MAN FOR RUNNING BALL POOL

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The first step in the attempt to smash "baseball pools" came Thursday with the arraignment of Henry F. Torren, arrested for violating the state lottery laws.

Torren is the head of the Metropolitan Baseball Information bureau. Subscribers to the "service" paid 25 cents a week, according to the charges against Torren and either selected or drew from a "blind pool" a combination of teams in the American, National, International and New York state leagues. The literature of the concern advertised "$1,000 in cash prizes given away to subscribers of our service", and the understanding that the teams scoring the greatest number of runs during the week drew the high prize for the offense.

After an investigation the district attorney's office decided that so many commissions were possible by taking teams from the four leagues that Torren's scheme amounted to nothing more than a lottery. Men, women and even young girls were "subscribers" of the bureau.

STATE NEWS

NO JAIL SENTENCES.

MUNCIE.—Clarence Smith, employed at the alleged "blind tiger" of Charles Benadum, for the second time within a week was fined $100, the limit penalty for the offense. It was expected to get 30 days in jail but his attorneys found the law regards the second offense the same as the first as regards penalty. This will relieve the many defendants in similar cases now being held, from jail sentences, it is thought.

CHOOSE NEW CAMP.

ARKANSAS HAS FOURTH GOVERNOR SINCE JAN. 13

They Were Liberal in Passing the Title Around, But the New Man May Stick.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 6.—Judge George W. Hays of Camden took office Wednesday as governor of Arkansas, succeeding Sen. J. M. Futrell, who had been acting governor for several months.

Judge Hays is the fourth man to take the oath since Jan. 13, 1913. On that date George W. Donaghey's term expired. He was succeeded by Cons. Joe T. Robinson, who a few weeks later resigned to qualify as U. S. senator. Sen. O. K. Oldham, president of the senate, then qualified, but the title of the office was sought a few days later by Sen. J. M. Futrell, president pro tem of the senate, and he won in court.

Judge Hays was elected July 23 at a special election.

NOT AN ESQUIRE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—"B. E. Donaldson", "Be E. Donaldson", rang through Judge van Fleet's courtroom while tale-men were being examined for the Digest trial. R. E. Donaldson came not and Commissioner Krull grew peevish.

Finally a deputy marshal announced that a summons addressed to "B. E. Donaldson" had been returned bearing this penciled statement:

"Am not an esquire. I am a Mrs."

When the guffaws subsided, Judge van Fleet announced that "woman jurors will not be accepted in this court" and the name was stricken from the list.

COL. CODY, AIR MAN, KILLED

Was American by Birth But Naturalized Englishman—Was Pioneer Bird Man.

ALDERSHOT, Eng., Aug. 7.—Col. S. F. Cody, one of the best known aviators in England, and a passenger named Evans were killed Thursday when Cody's monoplane turned turtle near here and buried both men under it when it crashed to earth.

Cody was an American by birth but became a naturalized Englishman several years ago. He was one of the pioneer birdmen of England and experimented with air-craft for several years before aviation was generally taken up here.

For a time he held the world's championship for cross-country flying which he established in September, 1909, at Aldershot. Most of his flying, in the last four years has been done near the scene of his death.

In June, 1910, Cody was seriously hurt by a fall and he had many minor accidents. He asserted that he used "warping wings" three years before that important feature of the modern aeroplane was patented by the Wrights.

FOUND WOMAN'S BODY IN SEA

Police of Coast Cities Try to Clear Up Identity of Drowned Person.

REVERE, Mass., Aug. 7.—Police of New York and other ports are seeking to clear up the identity of the young woman whose body, clad only in under clothes, was found on the beach at Point of Pines.

On the left hand was a wedding ring and a diamond solitaire. The underwear, of fine texture, was marked "Ruth M. Woodward". Diligent investigations here, in Boston and surrounding cities have failed to reveal any one by that name missing, and it was believed Thursday that the woman either fell or was thrown overboard by some boat.

Dr. E. J. Monahan examined the body Thursday. He found no marks of violence. Absence of water in the lungs, however, led him to believe that the woman may have been poisoned. The girl was about 25. The body had not been in the water more than two or three hours when found.
